This piano fell over and was damaged during a move. The piano is a 48" Studio upright in ebony color with a polyester finish. Upon my inspection of the piano, I noted some hairline cracks in various places on the soundboard, a larger one in particular in the upper right corner. Looking at the front of the piano there is damage to the polyester finish on both of the cabinet side rail pieces. The top front panel has some damage to the clamps that hold it in place. One clamp has broken and the other has stripped due to the inertia of the fall. There may be other damage that was not readily seen during my cursory inspection.

4,000.00

It is my recommendation that the piano be replaced with another piano of equal value. Upright pianos are built around the soundboard. To replace a soundboard the cabinet generally needs to be broken apart. In order to properly repair or replace the soundboard, the action, strings, cast iron plate all need to be removed. Repair costs could easily exceed the value of this piano.

Polyester finishes are like plastic and once they are damaged, they are always damaged. It is possible to attempt spot repairs, however if one knows where to look, one would be able to see the repair. The only way would be to completely strip the piano and start over. Unfortunately the South Coast Air Quality Management District does not allow the use of polyester.

To replace this piano with another of equal value, approx. $4,000.00.
